

I envision a vibrant, sustainable and truly inclusive future for Vincent. This vision has been shaped by heartfelt conversations with residents, business owners and community club members, a decade living in Vincent, volunteer work at local clubs, and experience leading a community campaign against a proposed 24 hour petrol station on Angove Street. I am committed to working collaboratively with you to create a liveable urban village in Vincent that:

- easily fills vacancies with quality businesses, community spaces and thoughtfully designed housing that places people's needs at the forefront while complementing our neighbourhood's character
- connects people with nature and takes urgent action on climate change
- ensures safety and amenities for pedestrians, cyclists, children, seniors and people with disability
- fosters strong community connections and thriving businesses by investing in events and the dedicated volunteers who make them possible
- is governed by a council that offers real value to ratepayers, openly shares performance data, embraces innovative technologies and communicates effectively.

While previous councils have made great strides in these areas, we are yet to reach our full potential, and I have the skills needed to see the job through. With 17 years in the WA public sector, I have the expertise to develop policies that truly benefit the community while ensuring responsible use of public funds. With a decade as a government negotiator, I know how to deliver results. My background in industrial relations, family experience in business and PhD from the UWA Business School have taught me about the unique needs of local businesses and their important role in our community's vitality. As a mother of young twins, I bring a compassionate, optimistic and forward-focused perspective. I promise to listen and prioritise your needs as we shape the future of Vincent together.
